

General Data Protection Regulation – Protecting You and Your Privacy

This is an important message from AK Teaching: New laws, acting in the interest of the individual, require firms to be more transparent about how they process your data.

We are retained by organisations to identify and place individuals into new employment opportunities. We have identified you as an individual that could be of interest to our clients.

We take your privacy very seriously and in order for us to keep you informed about relevant opportunities, we need to hold some relevant information about you. We will not hold your data for any other purpose than assisting you with future career opportunities.

We want to develop and maintain a trusted relationship with you. To learn more about what type of data we hold and how we ensure it is protected and secured, please click on the link below to view our Privacy Policy. You do have the right to object and if you don't wish to work with us we will, of course, permanently delete your data. To aid this process, and make it as clear for you as possible, please review your options below.

We hope you allow us to hold your data and look forward to establishing a professional and prosperous relationship with you.

Option 1: Automatic Opt in
